PREFATORY NOTE

The substance of this work appeared in 1897 under the heading "Chattertoniana" in the "Bibliographer's Manual of Gloucestershire Literature," vol. 3, pp. 318-37. The new references which have now been added were collected for a biographical supplement to the Manual, which, it is hoped, will shortly be in type. They became, however, much more numerous than was expected, and had the original intention been carried out, a student of Chattertonian literature could have formed no idea of its extent unless he had before him two volumes, the publication of which was separated by nearly 20 years. The inconvenience of this is obvious. It was, therefore, thought better to combine the old and new references in chronological order and publish them as an independent work.

Eight of the new references are due to the Bibliography in the Muses Library Edition of Chatterton's Works (1906) but these have been verified and amplified. The initials at the end of a collation indicate the owner of the copy of the work described, or the Library at which it was seen. My thanks are due to Mr Austin, of the Public Library, Gloucester, and Messrs. George's Sons, of Bristol, for having called my attention to works which would otherwise have escaped my notice, and for having given me valuable assistance in other ways. I am also indebted to Mr Austin for correcting my proofs.

It is not likely that any but students specializing in 18th century literature will often consult this little volume, and for these an explanatory statement would be superfluous, but in case any other members of the reading public should do so, a brief note of the origin and nature of the Rowley controversy will make the following pages more intelligible.

In the years 1768 and 1769, MS. copies of certain poems were placed in the hands of Messrs G. S. Catcott, W. Barrett and Horace Walpole by Chatterton, who alleged that he had copied them from documents that he had found in the muniment room over the N. Porch of the Church of S. Mary Redcliffe. He asserted that they were all written in the 15th century, and that most of them were by one Thomas Rowley, a secular priest of Bristol. In only a few cases were documents purporting to be the originals produced. After Chatterton's death these poems were collected and published in a volume entitled "Poems Supposed to have been Written at Bristol, by Thomas Rowley and others," and they at once became the subject of controversy in the leading magazines of the period.

The Rowleians relied chiefly on two arguments: (1) that it was impossible that such works could have been produced by an ill-educated lad of only 15 or 16 years old; and (2) that the Poems attributed to Rowley reached a much higher level of poetic excellence than those which were undoubtedly written by Chatterton. The main argument used by the anti-Rowleians was that the poems in question abounded in anachronism both in matters of history and language. They pointed out that the language in which they were written did not belong either to the 15th or to any other century, but was a jumble of words used at different periods with many words that had never been used before, and that it could only be described as the "Rowleian dialect." It is now universally admitted that Chatterton was the author of the Rowley Poems. If any further proof were required, it was furnished by Professor Skeat, who noticed that the word "hecke," which means a rack, is twice used in the Rowley Poems to mean a rock, and that the meaning of hecke in Kersey's Dictionary is through a typographical error given as "rock" instead of rack. As it is well known that Chatterton made use of Kersey's Dictionary, this is very striking. The following are the names of the principal disputants:—

ROWLEIANS	ANTI-ROWLEIANS
Jacob Bryant	Tyrwhitt	Sheridan
Dr Glynn	Horace Walpole	Dr Lort
E. B. Greene	Dr Warton	T. Astle

Most of Chatterton's acknowledged poems first appeared during his life in Magazines.

CHATTERTONIANA

1763-68. On the Last Epiphany, or, Christ coming to Judgment.
Felix Farley's Bristol Journal, Jan. 8, 1763.

[A description of the Mayor's first passing over the bridge at Bristol which was taken down c. 1757.] Id., Oct. 1, 1768

"On the Last Epiphany" was the first of Chatterton's productions which appeared in print. It was written when he was only 11 years old. The description of the Mayor's passing over the old bridge is accompanied by a letter to the Printer signed "Dunhelmus Bristolensis." He contributed other pieces to this Journal.

 Gorthmund. Translated from the Saxon. [D.B.] Id.,
 pp. 486-8.
 Adventures of a Star. Id., pp. 539-540.

The initials D.B. stand for Dunhelmus Bristolensis, the pseudonym which Chatterton appended to one of his contributions to Felix Farley's Journal.
 The Elegy (dated April 4) which commences

"Haste, haste! ye solemn messengers of night," is misplaced in the Aldine Edition, the arrangement of which is intended to be chronological. Professor Skeat reprinted it from Gardner's Miscellanies, and was apparently unaware of its former appearance.

There is a short prose piece "On Punning," dated June 17, 1770, in vol. ii. of the Town and Country Magazine, which is included in the 1803 edition of Chatterton's Works, but this, as Professor Skeat points out, is probably a mistake, as it is signed "T. B. Berkeley Square."

Chatterton acknowledged that some of the papers signed "A Hunter of Oddities" were his [See Aldine edition, vol. i, p. 358], but it does not seem certain that all of them should be ascribed to him. Broughton only included four (Nos. 2, 5, 6, 7) in the Miscellanies, 1778, and Southey and Cottle, though under the impression that they were printing all (See vol. iii., p. 222 of the 1803 edition) omitted No. (12). Neither editor placed them in the order of their appearance. Nos. (9), (10) and (11) are all dated after Chatterton's death. This is of course not conclusive that they were not written by him, as Hamilton (the editor of the Town and Country Magazine) may have had the MSS. in hand, and added the dates to suit the number of his magazine in which they appeared. "Gorthmund" and "The Adventures of a Star" were both printed by him after Chatterton's death.

- (5) May 22. To the Prime Minister.

- (6) May 26. [On an Exhibition of Sign Paintings.]
 (7) May 31. To the Freeholders of the City of Bristol.

Cuttings from the Middlesex Journal of all these letters except No. (4) have been seen. No. (4) was printed by Dix (with the others) in his life of Chatterton.

1770. Narva and Mored. London Magazine, vol. xxxix., pp. 268-9; The Death of Nicou. Id., pp. 320-2.

Both these poems are signed "C." The former is dated from Shoreditch, May 2, 1770, and the latter from Brooke-Street, June 12.

- The Prophecy. Political Register, vol. vi., pp. 322-4; To the Lord Mayor. Id., pp. 328-331.

The letter to the Lord Mayor, signed "Probus," was written by Chatterton. It is addressed to his patron, Beckford. Dix has reprinted from the Political Register another letter signed "Probus," addressed to Lord Dartmouth, but Professor Skeat questions its authorship.

- An Elegy On the Much Lamented Death of William Beckford, Esq. Late Lord-Mayor of, and Representative in Parliament for the City of London . . . [Quot.] London: 1770. 4to. B.M.

Pp. 14, including 2 titles. Price 1s. Written by Chatterton, whose genius Beckford seems to have recognized. Chatterton is said to have exclaimed, on hearing of Beckford's death, that he was ruined. He received £2 2s for this Elegy, which was the only one of his works published separately during his life.

Two Poems and a Letter by Chatterton. Resignation is only a portion of the Poem printed from the Chatterton MSS., in the editions of his collected works. The Consuliad is signed "C." and dated Bristol, Jan. 4, 1770. The MS. version of this poem in the B.M. is headed "The Constabliad." For 250 lines of the "Consuliad" Chatterton received from the editor of the Freeholder's Magazine 10s 6d. The letter to Lord North is signed "T.C."

- Elegy to the Memory of Mr Thomas Chatterton, late of Bristol. Town and Country Magazine, vol. ii., p. 551. B.M.

The Elegy is dated from "Bristol, October, 1770" and signed "T.C." It was written by Chatterton's friend, Thomas Carey. It appeared in the October Number, and was the first reference to Chatterton's death in the Magazine.

1772. The Execution of Sir Charles Bawdin. Dedicated to Her Grace the Dutches of Northumberland. Durat Opus Vatum. London. Price 2s 6d. 4to. B.M.

Title, &c., 3 leaves; Poem, pp. 1-26. Written by Chatterton. This is the first of the Rowley Poems that was separately printed. It will be found, under the title of "The Bristowe Tragedie," in the several editions of Chatterton's collected works. It was probably suggested by the death of Sir Baldwin Fulford, a Lancastrian, who was executed in Bristol in 1461. [Rowley Poems, 1st ed., 1777, p. xviii.]

Section xxvi., pp. 408-427.

The Section relating to the Rowley Poems was omitted from the 1871 edition.

1775. A short Account of William Cannings, Founder of St. Mary Redcliff's Church in Bristol. Wrote by Thomas Rowley Priest, in the year 1460. Town and Country Magazine, vol. vii., pp. 592-3.

The above will be found in Southey's edition of Chatterton's Works, vol. iii., p. 75. It is there printed as part of a longer piece.

1777. Poems, supposed to have been written at Bristol, by Thomas Rowley and Others, in the Fifteenth Century; the greatest part now first published from the most authentic copies, with an engraved specimen of one of the MSS. To which are added a Preface, an Introductory Account of the Several Pieces, and a Glossary. London: Pr. for T. Payne & Son, at the Mews-Gate, 1777. 8vo. B.M.

Title, Contents, &c., pp. i-xxvii.; Poems, pp. 1-288; Glossary, pp. 289-306; Errata, p. 307; Appendix, pp. 309-333. Facsimile of MS., p. 288. Eight of the pieces relate to Bristol.

This is the first edition of the poems by Chatterton which had been ascribed to Rowley. It was edited by Thomas Tyrwhitt. It was reviewed in the Monthly Review, vol. lvi., pp. 256-265, 321-328, and 445-449, where the poems were pronounced to be "the original productions of Rowley" altered by Chatterton. See also Gent. Mag., vol. xlvii., pp. 205-8, 275-9, 305-7, 317, 361-5, 425-7, 413-4, 481-2, 529; xlviii., 347-8, 403.

— The Second Edition. London: 1777. 8vo. B.R.L.

Apparently a duplicate of the First Edition.

— The Third Edition; To which is added An Appendix, containing some Observations upon the language of these Poems; tending to prove that they were written, not by any Ancient Author, but entirely by Thomas Chatterton. London: Printed for T. Payne & Son. 1778. 8vo. Bodl.

Two Titles, Contents, Preface, &c., one leaf and pp. i-xxvii.; Poems, pp. 1-288; Glossary, pp. 289-307; Appendix, pp. 309-333. Facsimile of MS., p. 288. This edition was edited by Tyrwhitt, who wrote the Glossary and Appendix. In the Bodleian copy there is inserted, as frontispiece, a portrait of "The Celebrated Mr George Catgut, of B—1." It is a likeness of George Catcott, a Bristol pewterer, who was one of Chatterton's dupes.

— [Another Edition.] With a Commentary in which the Antiquity of them is considered and defended. By Jeremiah Milles, D.D., Dean of Exeter . . . [Quot.] London: 1782. 4to. B.R.L.

1777-79. An Account of the finding or forging of some very ingenious Poems attributed to Thomas Rowley . . . Annual Register, vol. xix., pp. 155-162. A short Account of William Cannings . . . Wrote by the foregoing Thomas Rowley, Id., pp. 162-5. Further Remarks on the supposed ancient Poems, ascribed to Rowley, Id., vol. xxi., pp. 153-8.

1778. Miscellanies in Prose and Verse ; by Thomas Chatterton, the supposed author of the Poems published under the names of Rowley, Canning, &c. London. 1778. 8vo. B.M.

Two Titles, Contents, Preface, etc., pp. i-xxxii ; Miscellanies, pp. 1-245. This volume contains none of the Rowley Poems. It was edited by John Broughton. Haslewood erroneously attributed its editorship to Barrett, whose Christian name was William and the Preface is signed "J.B." John Broughton was a Bristol Attorney, brother of the Rev. A. Broughton, Vicar of St. Mary Redcliffe Church. These Miscellanies were reviewed in the Gent. Mag., vol. lviii., p. 424. A Supplement (q.v.) appeared in 1784.

1779. A Letter to the Editor of the Miscellanies of Thomas Chatterton. Strawberry-Hill : Pr. by T. Kirgate, 1779. 8vo. B.M.

Two Titles, 2 leaves : Letter (signed by Horace Walpole and dated from Strawberry Hill, May 23, 1778), pp. 1-41 ; Postscript and Appendix, pp. 42-55. There are portraits of Horace Walpole and Dr. Dodd inserted in the B.M. Copy. This letter was re-printed in the Gent. Mag., vol. lli., with Appendices. See infra, 1782.

1780. Love and Madness. A Story too True in a Series of Letters Between Parties, whose Names would perhaps be mentioned were they less known, or lamented. London : Printed for G. Kearsly at No. 46, near Serjeants Inn, Fleet Street. 1780. 8vo. H.E.N.

Title & Contents, &c., pp. i-vi ; Quotation from Othello, one leaf ; Letters & Errors, pp. 1-[296.] This work consists of a series of love letters purporting to have passed between the Rev. James Hackman and Miss Martha Ray, which are now generally regarded as fictitious and believed to have been written by Sir Herbert Croft, but the editor of the last edition (1895) still maintains their authenticity. Letter xlix. (pp. 125-244) contains a graphic account of Chatterton's Life and Poems and is a valuable contribution to the Rowley Controversy. This letter was unquestionably written by Croft, who, in writing it, made an unwarrantable use of papers which had been lent to him by Chatterton's sister Mary Newton. In it he published letters and three of Chatterton's Poems ("Apostate Will," "Happiness" and "The Resignation,") which had never before been printed. Nor did he, after having made large profits by the sale of Love and Madness, make her any adequate recompense. He was charged with this by Southey in the Monthly Magazine of Nov. 1799. Croft gave a very unsatisfactory explanation of his conduct in a letter which first appeared in the Gent. Mag., vol. lxx., and was afterwards published separately, entitled Chatterton and "Love and Madness", 1800. [q.v.] Southey's rejoinder appeared in the Gent. Mag., vol. lxx., p. 226. Love and Madness was reviewed in the Gent. Mag., vol. l., pp. 287-8.

Title, one leaf; Preface, dated Mar. 15th, 1782, pp. 3-10; Epistle (in verse), pp. 11-18. This Epistle first appeared in the Public Advertiser in 3 parts. Pt. 1. was published on Mar. 23, Pt. II. on Mar. 29, and Pt. III. on Mar. 30, 1782. It is written in the Rowleian dialect. Its authorship has been attributed to Mason [Gent. Mag., vol. lxxxvi., pt. 1 pp. 489, 490], but it is more probable that it was written by John Baynes, a harrister, although he disclaimed it. It was reviewed in the Monthly Review, vol. lxvi., pp. 294-8 Critical Review, liv., 19-22.

No. cxliv. On the Poems attributed to Rowley, vol. 2, pp. 247-51. These Essays went through 16 editions. Also at same pages, vol. 2, of the 1785 and 1791 editions; at pp. 239-42 of the 1793 edition; and in vol. 3 of the 1787, 1800 and 1808 editions at pp. 205-10, 149-54 & 132-7 respectively. It did not appear in the first or second editions. In the 1782 & 1785 editions (and probably in one or two more which have not been seen) Chatterton's death was attributed to the "magnitude" of his spirit, and there was a fine passage expressing sympathetic appreciation of his character. In the 9th edition, "haughtiness" was substituted for "magnitude," and the eloquent eulogy was deleted. See Gent. Mag., lix., 602-3, 684, 707

- [1785 ?] Supplement to Chatterton's Miscellanies. 8vo. B.M.

A Poem (entitled "Kew Gardens"), pp. 16. No title-page. P. 1 is signed B. Kew Gardens was not included in the Supplement of 1784. Only a portion (about 376 lines) of the poem is here printed. An extract from it (some 84 lines) was printed in Southey's edition. It was first printed in extenso by Dix, in 1837. It will be found in the Cambridge and Aldine Editions. About 50 lines of it occur also in a satire by Chatterton, entitled "The Exhibition," which is still in MS. and said to be unfit for publication. Some of its lines are also repeated in "The Whore of Babylon."

The Correspondence here published passed between John Chapman, W. Barrett, Dr Ducarel and others. It bears dates between Dec. 1771 and Sept. 1772. The grounds for attributing this Sonnet to Chatterton are not stated, and it is not included in the editions of his collected Poems.

— The Romavnte of a Knyghte. s.sh. 8vo. C.W.G.

Said to have been one of Chatterton's earliest poems. Printed for the first time from the original MS. by Jas. Dallaway. Dated at end. Chatterton alleged that it had been written by John de Bergham, c. 1320, and he gave it, together with a pedigree of the De Bergham family which he had concocted, to Henry Burgum in the Spring of 1767. At the same time he gave Burgum a modernised version which is always placed among Chatterton's acknowledged poems.

— Sonnets to an Æolian Harp ; on the death of Chatterton . . . By James Dallaway. Privately printed at his Press at the Fort.

Not seen. The above title was copied from the catalogue of the Bodleian Library, but the book could not be examined, as it had been mislaid.

No other work is known to have emanated from the press at "The Fort," probably "Rodborough Fort," which was purchased by the author's father, a Stroud Banker, in 1787, and where Dallaway may have been living about this time, as he was a Curate at Rodborough. 1787-93.

in public Offices or private Hands ; Illustrated with Copper-Plate Prints. By William Barrett, Surgeon, F.S.A. Bristol : Pr. by William Pine, in Wine-Street. 4to. B.R.L.

Pp. xix. & 704. Extracts from the Rowley Poems and some of Chatterton's letters, pp. 629-648.

This work occupied its author nearly 30 years, but its value is small on account of Barrett's implicit belief in the authenticity of the Rowley manuscripts, from which many of his facts are derived. Indeed some of Chatterton's forgeries were executed for the express purpose of duping Barrett. A facsimile of one of these forgeries is given after page 636, and the folding plate of "Bristol Castle as in 1138" facing p. 196 is from a drawing by Chatterton. Barrett died a few months after the appearance of his history, "doubtless overwhelmed by disappointment at the ridicule" that had been heaped upon it. "Yet, dead though the book itself is, and as it has been from the first, as an authority, it will long be regarded as a curiosity from its association with the 'marvellous hoy' Chatterton." (Dict. Nat. Biog., vol. iii., pp. 285-6.)
